

Chichen Itzá & Ex Convent “San Bernardino de Siena”

Chichen Itzá...

Is the worldwide most known pre-Columbian city in the northern Yucatán; its astonishing monumental architecture tells the history of its occupation by the pre-Hispanic Maya and Toltec culture. The famous Kukulcan Pyramid, the largest Mesoamerican Ball Court and the Astronomical Observatory are only a few of the magnificent structures found within the site. Since 1988, Chichen Itza is a UNESCO World Heritage site. In 2007 it was elected as one of the New 7 Wonders of the world.

Ex-Convent “San Bernardino de Siena”...

Built in 1552 in the city of Valladolid, was the first seat of the Franciscan order in the Yucatan Peninsula. The convent is a testimony of the Maya evangelization at the time of the Spanish conquest. Later, it was used as an important strategic point during the Rebellion of the Yucatan native population against the white community; historically referred to as “The Cast War”.

Tulum

Tulum...

Means “Wall” in Maya, because of its original wall surrounding the site. It is the only Maya city situated right at the shores of the Mexican Caribbean. Tulum represents an important pre-hispanic harbour for the sea trade. It was also a witness of the encounter between the two worlds; Maya natives and Spanish explorers.

The sensational contrast of ancient monuments and the present sounds of the turquoise blue Caribbean Sea make it worth while visiting.

Cobá & Cenote

Cobá...

Is the heart of a large metropolis; center of ceremony and trade of the ancient Maya civilization. The most impressive monument, the Nohoch Mul pyramid, is the highest in the Yucatán Peninsula at 137 feet and still accessible to climb to its temple on the top.

The Ancient roads, known as “sac beob”, are easy access and give a great opportunity to explore this archeological site by bicycle discovering the local tropical jungle and enigmatic monumental architecture hidden by lush vegetation.

Cenote Labna-Ha...

In Maya “Dz’onot”, describes a naturally formed cavity in the limestone bedrock, which leads to a large underground freshwater river system.

Cenotes are commonly better known as freshwater filled caverns, which are fully decorated with magnificent stalagmite and stalactite formations and accessible for swimming and live a wonderful experience, unique in the world!
